

The Dimensional Difference

Dimensional's long-term track record demonstrates our ability to deliver benchmark-beating results

Most funds in the industry do not beat their benchmarks. Index funds aren't even designed to beat benchmarks; instead, they aim to match them before taking into account fees and expenses.

The majority of active mutual funds and exchange-traded funds (ETFs) fall short of their benchmarks over time, and the results often become worse as you look over longer time periods. Many do not survive.

We believe our track record demonstrates that Dimensional funds are different.

Dimensional funds are designed to outperform their benchmarks, and the long-term track record demonstrates our ability to deliver benchmark-beating results.

While any investment manager may be able to point to a fund or two that has delivered outperformance over shorter periods, we believe examining the complete body of work across all funds gives you more information about that manager's track record.

That's the Dimensional difference.

DIMENSIONAL VS. THE INDUSTRY

Percentage of US-domiciled active equity and fixed income funds that outperformed their benchmark as of March 31, 2025

Performance data shown represents past performance and is no guarantee of future results. The sample includes funds at the beginning of each respective period. Survivors are funds that had returns for every month in the sample period. Outperformers (winner funds) are funds that survived the sample period and whose cumulative net return over the period exceeded that of their respective benchmark. Each fund is evaluated relative to its respective primary prospectus benchmark. Where the full series of primary prospectus benchmark returns is unavailable, non-Dimensional funds are instead evaluated relative to their Morningstar category index. See Appendix for more information.

Risks include loss of principal and fluctuating value. Investment value will fluctuate, and shares, when redeemed, may be worth more or less than original cost.

Diversification neither assures a profit nor guarantees against loss in a declining market. There is no guarantee strategies will be successful.

ETFs trade like stocks, fluctuate in market value and may trade either at a premium or discount to their net asset value. ETF shares trade at market price and are not individually redeemable with the issuing fund, other than in large share amounts called creation units. ETFs are subject to risk similar to those of stocks, including those regarding short-selling and margin account maintenance. Brokerage commissions and expenses will reduce returns.

Methodology

The beginning samples include funds as of the start of each respective time period. Surviving funds are those with return observations for every month of the sample period. Each fund is evaluated relative to its primary prospectus benchmark. Where the full series of primary prospectus benchmark returns is unavailable, non-Dimensional funds are instead evaluated relative to their Morningstar category index. Outperformers are funds that survived the sample period and whose cumulative net return over the period exceeded that of their respective benchmark. We aggregate funds with multiple share classes to the strategy
